These moments really caught us by surprise!

GH Luke Supports Lulu's Decision

Lulu made her decision to have an abortion, and now she just had to go through with it. As the hour for her procedure approached, time almost seemed frozen. Although Luke always considered himself a lousy parent, this one particular evening, he was doing a fine job for his daughter. In fact, he was even prepared to defend her from Lucky! "Lulu, you don't have to do this!" screamed a stoned Lucky. His cruel words cut like a knife, causing his sister to break out in uncontrollable tears. Luke jumped in, "Do what? Make a decision that you and a bunch of other loudmouths don't agree with and have the guts to follow through and face the consequences? Huh? That's called courage, cowboy, something you used to understand." After Lucky stormed out and the emotional dust settled, Luke tried to lighten the mood. In the process, however, his own ghosts surfaced. "Don't make a habit of it — going back, I mean. Anywhere — attics, department stores, discos," he said. She smiled. "I can't imagine you dancing at a disco," she said. "Did you wear a white suit?" He continued to ease her load with small talk. "Haven't you heard? I killed disco. It died a hideous death. And that hair was not my fault." Although some of her worry was lifted, her dread was still very real. "Maybe Lucky's right," she said. "Maybe it's good that Mom's sick, and if she knew about this — everything that's happening — she would be so disappointed in me." Moving in closer, Luke set her straight. "Laura would never be disappointed in you taking charge of your own life." He kissed her forehead and held her hand tightly. Sometimes, the chemistry between Anthony Geary (Luke) and Julie Marie Berman (Lulu) is so believable, so layered and complex, that it's hard to fathom that they're not father and daughter. Fear, sadness and, most of all, the loss of innocence... all in one scene.
